A cross sectional study of health-related aspects, migration specific issues and awareness about Government and other official services among migrant workers working in campus of an Educational Complex in rural area of North Maharashtra.

Background: Migrant workers are prone to poor health, low wages, and 3D works (degrading, dirty and dangerous), fear for loss of job and poor living standards, taking jobs that local residents would refuse at times. Awareness about the rights and laws pertaining to them is usually poor too. This study was planned with the objective of assessing health related aspects of migrant workers, migration specific issues and awareness about Government and other official services. Methods: Study was conducted on campus of an Educational Complex. The questionnaire was administered by the researcher in local/national language as per need individually to each participant. This was followed by General Health Examination. The questionnaire was divided into five subgroups: Section I: Socio Demographic data; Section II: Health related aspects of Migrant Workers; Section III: Migration Specific Issues; Section IV Personal Traits; Section V: Awareness about Government and other official services. Anthropometric measurements were taken followed by physical examination. Treatment was provided for the ailments which were diagnosed at the time of health check-up. A Health talk was given at the end of the session regarding good hygienic practices, prevention and treatment of addictions, various government schemes and how to avail them etc. Results: Prevalence of Obesity, Hypertension was around 10 % respectively. Majority of the population was totally unaware of the labour laws and medical schemes (more than 95%) pertaining to them. Whereas a majority of them had bank accounts (79%) on their name for salary purposes due to the agency company rules, same could be seen in the low addiction rates (72.86 %) due to the company rules. Knowledge about the use of personal protection gear use and its application was seen (72%). Along with the precautions regarding working in a hospital cases of needle prick injuries could be seen with no notion regarding its effects. A direct correlation regarding home visiting and happiness of the people could be gauged. Lack of hygiene, cleanliness & basic necessities could be observed. Conclusions: Routine health check-ups, information about personal protection measures, can lead to effective prevention of ailments Steps need to be taken regarding the accessibility with acceptability of the schemes and policies in their regards. Special attention should be paid in regards to provision of basic facilities for better life and their upliftment.
